Azaleas

We specialize in growing Azaleas, as our climate and soil are very well adapted to the raising of these beautiful plants. The Azaleas we offer are well grown under ideal conditions and are healthy and vigorous. A visit to our nursery, or a trial order will convince you of their high quality.

Our Azaleas are especially recommended for Winter forcing. They can also be used for garden planting through the Eastern States, with a little Winter protection.

Azaleas thrive best in a well-drained, loamy, acid soil and require very little attention; however, they should not be allowed to become dry.

Our Azaleas have a wonderful root system with the soil intact and are shipped with a ball of earth.

AZALEA LEDIFOLIA (Indica)

This group of evergreen Azaleas probably originated in Japan and are closely related to the Indian Azaleas which are grown in the Southern States. The plants might grow to a height of 6 feet or more, but have a spreading habit. The large, dull green foliage is thicker than the Japanese Azaleas. The flowers are large and vary in color. This group of Azaleas is fine for landscape planting from Long Island south, along the Atlantic seaboard, and with a little protection will no doubt prove hardy in colder climates.

Holly (Ilex)

Hollies with their glossy evergreen foliage and attractive berries which remain on the branches often until the following Spring, making very ornamental small or medium sized trees. They are highly recommended for specimen plants or hedges. The berry-bearing trees are fertilized by the pollen-bearing trees and should be planted in the vicinity of each other. Hollies thrive best in a rich, well-drained soil.

Aquifolium (English Holly). 10-15 ft. Glossy evergreen, spiny foliage; bright red berries; ideal for hedges. Not as hardy as the American Holly. The plants we offer are seedling grown and we are unable to tell the berry-bearing plants.
